When we need to get somewhere quickly and cheaply, this popular ride-sharing app motors to our rescue. We appreciate the variety in our vehicle choices—from budget-friendly carpools to swanky SUVs—as much as we love knowing when our ride is arriving and exactly how much it'll cost. Heck, now we even use it as a verb: "We're going to Uber to your place. Be right there!" It's been a good run but I'm over it. As of recent, I keep having to order my rides 20-30 minutes early to get to work on time and even then, I don't get to work on time. People are so in a hurry to accept a ride that they accept rides knowing they are 30 minutes away and in the middle of dropping off someone else instead of letting the ride go to another person. I watched a person PURPOSELY drive in the opposite direction of my pick up location after they dropped off the other passenger (this was after I waited for about 15 minutes). It went from 13 minutes away to 28 all because the person seemed to keep driving home instead of just cancelling. That's ridiculous! The day before that I had another driver who decided to accept a ride knowing they were 30 minutes away and I ended up cancelling because even when 15 minutes passed they still hadn't dropped off their other passenger. I tried to hold on because I love Uber and it's perks, but it's not worth it with the recent surge of crappy drivers. There's no support number and I couldn't even report the person who drove in the opposite direction of my pick up location. I'm done. Account deleted. I'll be with Lyft from this point forward and I hope to have no issues. I heard so many good stories about people using Uber and being pleased with its service, but when my wife and I reached Los Angeles and decided to use it I found out the harsh reality. Unfortunately, Uber has become a master of deception using its large user base to suggest confidence, but after getting a quote for a little over 40 dollars, my wife and I ended up getting charged almost 100 dollars because of difference in "time" and "distance." I would be fine if that were the truth, but instead we had a driver that wasn't focused and missed his exit, then his phone died and we had to use our own phones to guide him. This resulted in us having to drive another 30 minutes just because their own driver didn't plan ahead or pay attention to the road. I will NEVER use Uber again because the only thing they did to "fix" the problem was give me 5 Uber bucks without any notification and then ignore any requests sent via app to find a proper resolution. So much for customer "support." UPDATE After a few days of trying to find out how to talk with support staff directly I was able to reach a satisfying solution. I believe the best way to avoid situations like this would be to make the app send a notification when support staff message you, instead of you having to dig and find out where to talk to them. Because of their understanding I may use Uber again, but just be wary about knowing where to contact anyone in case of a bad ride. Hi, we are sorry to hear that your experience with the fares, driver-partner, and our support team response was not up to the mark and we'd want to improve the same for you. Drop more details regarding the same and we'd do the needed. The developer, Uber Technologies, Inc., indicated that the app's privacy practices may include handling of data as described below.
